FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE The Econometric Society Elects 42 New Fellows

October 11, 2024 (New Haven, CT)—The Econometric Society announces the election of 42 new Fellows from six regions of the world.

Founded in 1930, the Econometric Society is an international society for the advancement of economic theory in its relation to statistics and mathematics. The main activities of the Society are publication of the journals Econometrica, Quantitative Economics, and Theoretical Economics, publication of a research Monograph Series, organization annually of scientific meetings in six regions of the world, and a World Congress once every five years.

For more than 90 years, the Society has been electing Fellows. Candidates for Fellow are nominated by members, Fellows, and a Fellows Nominating Committee (FNC) and elected by the Society's active Fellows.

"Election as a Fellow of the Econometric Society is a recognition of important contributions to Economics. The Fellows represent the highest authority of the Society. I congratulate them on this great honor," said Eliana La Ferrara, President of the Econometric Society.

Since 1931, only 1,187 total fellows have been elected. The 42 new fellows bring this number to 1,229 elected. To date, 84 Econometric Society Fellows have won the Nobel Prize in Economics (the Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Sciences in Memory of Alfred Nobel). Of these 84, 28 have been President of the Econometric Society.

Elected this year are candidates from the following regions:

Primary affiliation:
28 North America
11 Europe
1 Australasia
2 Latin America

Secondary affiliation:
1 Europe/Asia
1 North America/Africa
1 North America/Australasia
3 North America/Latin America

Of these, 26 are men and 16 are women.
